

Ashley Howard, MPA, CFRE

Ashley Howard is a Senior Corporate Partnerships Manager at Feeding America's national office based in Chicago, Illinois. Ashley is responsible for developing strategic partnerships for corporate entities who are teaming with Feeding America in the fight against hunger. In this role Ashley manages some of Feeding America's top corporate partners through cause marketing, employee engagement, and facilitates in making substantial philanthropic investments. As an advocate for transformative change in the anti-hunger movement, Ashley collaborates with corporate leaders to actively bridge the hunger gap by addressing root causes of food insecurity.

Before joining Feeding America, Ashley worked in the nonprofit sector doing development work in both national and local organizations. Ashley is an alumna of Western Michigan University and holds Master of Public Administration from Rutgers University. In addition to Ashley's 13 years of fundraising, she was named as a Certified Fund Raising Executive (CFRE) demonstrating her commitment to philanthropy and donors served.

Ashley is an avid foodie, fitness enthusiast, and lover of the beautiful city of Chicago. Ashley enjoys spending time with her husband and two sons.