

Lora York joined the Chicago Foundation for Women in October 2012. She leads the program team and manages the foundation's grantmaking programs, which includes CFW's workforce development, reproductive justice and gender-based violence initiatives as well as grantee capacity building programs. Previously, she worked at the Eleanor Foundation and assisted the organization through its strategic transition from direct service provider to public foundation and the creation of its grants program. During the strategic alliance, she helped transition the Eleanor Foundation's grant portfolio to CFW. Lora has a Bachelor's degree in history from the University of Pittsburgh and is a board member of the Asset Funders Network.
