

Jamal Malone is Chief Executive Officer for Ada S. McKinley Community Services. Ada S. McKinley is a comprehensive social services organization with over 500 employees that serves 6,000 people a year at over 70 program sites throughout the Chicago metropolitan area, Wisconsin and Indiana. Previously, Jamal Malone was the Chief Operating Officer and Chief Financial Officer for National Children's Center, Inc. (NCC). NCC provides services for children and adults with developmental disabilities throughout Washington, D.C. and Maryland.

Jamal has a mind for business with a heart for service. He began his career as a Management Consultant with Ernst & Young. After E&Y, Jamal started an entrepreneurial venture, J&M Professional Services - to consult for small businesses, not-for-profits and civic organizations. He has worked with a wide array of organizations including The Boy Scouts of America, CVS/Caremark and OfficeMax in various leadership roles. Most importantly, as a husband and father of three sons, his passion for working with young people extends throughout all aspects of his life. Jamal has a MBA, cum laude from the University of Notre Dame and BA in Accounting, Michigan State University. He has served on numerous boards in leadership roles, and has won several academic and professional awards. Jamal is currently Chairman of the Board for Illinois Partners for Human Service. He is one of the select few to be Fellows of both Leadership Greater Washington (c/o 2014) and Leadership Greater Chicago (c/o 2018). Jamal is an avid swimmer and he enjoys playing chess.
