

Ashley Gill, CFRE

Ashley is an association management professional with a focus on fundraising and more than 15 years of proven success in leading development program growth. She is the Director of the ASGE Foundation at the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy, a medical society composed of 15,000 members from the US and beyond dedicated to advancing patient care and digestive health by promoting excellence and innovation in endoscopy. Ashley is chiefly responsible for planning, implementing and managing a strategic and comprehensive development program that includes annual giving campaigns, special events, prospect research, cultivation, planned giving, gift solicitation and other unique campaigns.

Ashley received her Certified Fund Raising Executive credential in 2015. She has been a member of the Chicago chapter of Association of Fundraising Professionals since 2008 and is currently on the member engagement committee, which develops activities that provide a meaningful connection with members and the philanthropic community. Ashley received her B.A. in Sociology with a minor in Spanish from the University of Mississippi and loved organizing fundraisers and special events for local organizations in Oxford, where she really found her passion for philanthropy. When she's not fundraising, you can find her volunteering at the local animal shelter, playing golf and walking her Boxer mix Kona.
