

George B. Rattin

he/him/his

George has spent his career primarily in leadership and advancement in support of education. He currently serves as Executive Director of Development at Rosalind Franklin University of Medicine and Science, a graduate school focusing on the interprofessional education of the next generation of health and biomedical professionals who are dedicated to the discovery of knowledge and improving wellness. In his role, he leads a team focused on supporting RFU's major and principal individual and gift planning donors. Currently he leads the university's scholarship initiative. Before joining RFU in 2016, he spent over 20 years as a consultant, institutional leader, chief advancement officer, and teacher.

George is an active member of the nonprofit community. He serves AFP Chicago as a member of the Continuous Learning Council, and also has served as a peer mentor. George additionally is a member of the American Association of Medical Colleges, Group on Institutional Advancement where he is a judge within their Awards of Excellence program, as well as a member on the Discipline Advisory Group (Development). George also is a member of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. George has been a presenter, facilitator and organizer in all the organizations of which he is a member. His service reflects a larger view of the importance of nonprofit organizations to the world and the belief that through collaboration all benefit more.

He holds a Master's degree in Educational Supervision and Administration from Loyola University Chicago and a Bachelor of Arts in the Teaching of English from the University of Illinois at Chicago. George is a lifelong learner and holds many certificates and certifications within advancement.